

Workshop directors

Environmental public health measures in natural disasters

Dario Brdaric is employee of the Institute of Public Health for the Osijek-Baranya County, Osijek, Croatia. He is a Lecturer at the University of Applied Health Sciences in Zagreb, Croatia. He has more than 10 years of rich experience in environmental protection, public health and management of the EU, UN, national and local projects. He completed his PhD in environmental sciences at the J. J. Strossmayer University of Osijek, Croatia and Ruder Boskovic Institute in Zagreb, Croatia. He graduated environmental public health. In Institute of Public Health for the Osijek-Baranya County, Osijek, Croatia

he leads Horizon 2020 project which is related to the implementation of public health policies. He has led several projects in the field of environmental protection and public health, he worked on international projects related to the implementation of the UN and EU policies.

In 2014 he was engaged in the supervision and implementation of anti-epidemic control measures at the flooded areas in eastern Croatia. He was trained in Portugal by Erasmus + program in Environmental Health Academic Management and Indoor Air Quality. He holds International Leadership certificate. He actively participated in professional and scientific conferences. He was trained at international workshops. He is author of numerous scientific and professional papers. He is a member of several national and international professional organizations.