

Workshop directors

Crisis Management Systems

Goran Milić (1974) graduated in 2010 at the University of Applied Sciences Velika Gorica – study program Crisis Management. He worked as a civil protection technician at the Ministry of the Interior (2000- 2004), as a senior professional advisor for international relations at the National Protection and Rescue Directorate (2005 – 2012), as a head of the Department for operating activities at the Civil Protection Sector – NPRD (2012 – 2015). Since December 2015 he has worked as head of the Service for operation, equipping and development – Deputy Commander of Croatian Civil Protection in the Sector for Civil Protection – NPRD. He participated primarily in the development of operating capacities of civil protection through national and international projects and activities, especially through the organization of education and training. Since 2009 at the University of Applied Sciences Velika Gorica and since 2011 at the College of Occupational Safety and Health, he has participated in teaching of several subjects in the area of crisis management. He participated in the organization and work of numerous courses, symposia, conferences and exercises in Croatia and abroad. He has published 15 professional papers in the field of crisis management. He participated in the activities of providing international assistance in case of major accidents and disasters to other countries, and in operating activities in case of floods and refugee crisis in the Republic of Croatia.