

Workshop director

Sanitary Handling in Cases of Eco Accidents

Pavle Jeličić, MD, a specialist in epidemiology and environmental health, head of the Division of Environmental Health and head of the Department of General Environmental Health and Environmental Sanitation at the Croatian Institute of Public Health, Rockefeller Str. 7, Zagreb. After completing the postgraduate study programme in "International Health Management", he received the MSc. Degree in healthcare management. He is a long-time lecturer on seminars pertaining to disinfection, pest and rodent control and the protection of stored agricultural products, as well as continuous education seminars in the field of disinfection, pest and rodent control. His current professional and scientific interests involve topics in Epidemiology and Public Health.

During the floods in Croatia in 2014, he implemented public health measures, in addition to providing healthcare education for the population in the flooded areas.

He was involved as a healthcare coordinator for migrants in the Opatovac and Slavonski Brod refugee camps during the migrant crisis in 2015 and 2016.